STRUCTURE

IACA's IMACC is a two-year programme consisting of seven modules and a master's thesis.

Four modules are completed in the first academic year, followed by three modules and the master's thesis in the second year.

Each module runs in 11 to 13 weeks. The modules comprise of several core module and stand-alone courses, and practical compliance projects and labs. They are composed of self-study readings, interactive presentations, discussion forums, self-assessment, group works, live sessions, written assignments, webinars, etc.

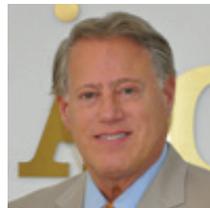

LECTURER EXPERIENCE

Heike J. Boehme

Qualified attorney,
Chief Compliance Officer

“Teaching hinges on teaching both content and skills. I want my students to develop a holistic approach of addressing corruption risks: to understand the legal bases and to make connections with people, to understand the reasoning for their actions. I share my broad practical experience from a legal advisory and in-house perspective, from the industry and the NGO sector. But good teaching also depends upon intellectual exchange - the interactions with professionals of diverse backgrounds at the IMACC classroom offer exactly that!

Michael Hershman

Co-founder of Transparency
International and
Chairperson of IACA's International
Senior Advisory Board

“The International Anti-Corruption Academy once again demonstrates its innovative approach to ethics and good governance by announcing the start of the new master's degree programme in anti-corruption compliance and collective action. The curriculum for this programme is designed for compliance and ethics professionals who want to increase their knowledge in areas such as best practices in compliance, ethics, risk management, internal investigations, and collective action.

“Many IMACC students have a proven track record as agents of change in their respective countries. During or shortly after IMACC some have been promoted to senior positions, some have made career moves, some have implemented new ideas, some started promising academic projects. IMACC strikes a very good balance between theory and practice, with in depth content presented by renowned scholars and practitioners. I believe the new online version will not only reach a broader and more diverse audience but also will provide up to date content in an up to date platform.
